

TOWN OF WAKEFIELD — 2001

WOODVILLE SCHOOL

The Woodville School has been there for 80 years whenever the School Department has wanted it for various purposes.

The town owned property on the east side of Farm Street south of the Mill River has been used as a school site for many more decades than eight, however. At some time prior to 1838 the Little World School (even older than the four schools erected in 1847, including the present West Ward School), a wooden building, was constructed near the present school. The only reason we know the original school existed is that the 1838 School Committee report mentions it.

By a request of the residents of the area, the name Little World was changed to Woodville during the 1856-57 school year, a name which has been attached to two buildings on the lot for the past 133 years, the original structure and the present one.

The new building, designed by the architectural firm of Hoyt & Perkins, opened Wednesday, September 8, 1920, which also happened to be state primary day, the first day Wakefield women were able to vote for all candidates rather than be limited to School Committee voting. After it was open, the old building was razed.

On March 18, 1919, town meeting on a 121-1 vote appropriated $52,000 for the building via bonds but it became evident that was not enough so on June 10, 1919, another $15,000 was voted 185-15.

By June 15, 1919, the contracts had been awarded to Joseph Nicholson & Son of Boston, general contractors ($48,543), including a plumbing contract sublet to Thomas P. Loughlin of Wakefield; Stone-Underhill Heating and Ventilating Company ($7513); and Heywood Brothers and Wakefield Company (equipment, $3056.65).

The 1920 School Department report in the Town Report stressed that the new Woodville School was the first in town with electric clocks and that the building was equipped as a civic center with arrangements for a stereopticon and a moving picture machine.

Before the structure was built, some of the Italian speaking residents of the Valley, Melvin and Water Streets area sued to try to block construction of the school, not wanting their children to have to walk to Farm Street instead of to the Lincoln or Franklin Schools. An injunction to block construction was denied. The actual Woodville district was drawn west only to Newhall Court, and thus did not touch the areas complained about.

On October 27, 1920, the Woodville School Parent-Teacher Association began operation with Principal George E. Hayes as president, Clarence Hogg as vice president, Salvatore Guarnaccia as treasurer (he translated the remarks of the principal for the majority of the audience) and Percy Nute as secretary.

The school twice has been lined up for closing because of dipping enrollments; after using four of the six classrooms in 1942-43, the number of rooms used fell to three in 1943-44 and to two in 1944-45 before the mothballing took place from 1946 through 1950. In 1950 the school reopened as an elementary school when it was needed for increasing enrollments. In 1954 it was used for double sessions and in 1955 the Woodville was reopened as a six-grade elementary school. Nearly 30 years later it was again ready to be mothballed as enrollment skidded, but this time the alternative high school, started in 1979, was moved from WHS to take over the Woodville.

The Alternative School enabled high school students, having difficulty with the regular style of education at WHS, to continue in a high school with a different approach. The Alternative School remained at Woodville School when, in 1996, the program was returned to the High School. Dearborn Academy was also housed in the Woodville School from 1986-1996.

1996 SEEM Collaborative housed the Campus Academy at the Woodville School which remained there until the building closed in the fall of 1999.
